Did you know that the American Cancer Society predicts 152,810 new cases of colorectal cancer by the end of this year? What’s more, over the last few decades, a growing number of people under the age of 55 have been diagnosed with it. That’s why the age to start screening for colorectal cancer is much lower now than it used to be.

WHAT IS COLORECTAL CANCER?
Colorectal cancer is a type of cancer that starts as a growth (or polyp) on the innermost layer of the colon or rectum (which is why it’s often called colon cancer or rectal cancer). Although most polyps are noncancerous, some may eventually develop into cancer and grow outward into the wall. From there, they can also spread to blood vessels, lymph nodes or other parts of the body. Fortunately, with regular screenings, colorectal cancer is one of the most preventable types of cancer.

THE VALUE OF PREVENTATIVE SCREENINGS
The American Cancer Society recommends starting regular colorectal cancer screenings at age 45 (or younger, if you have a family history of colorectal cancer or are otherwise at high risk) and continuing them through age 75 (or 85, if recommended by your provider).

There are two main types of colorectal cancer screenings:

- Stool-based tests: These tests study the stool for signs of cancer. While less invasive than colonoscopies, they must be performed more often.
- Colonoscopies: During a colonoscopy, your doctor looks at the entire lining of your colon and rectum with a colonoscope, a flexible tube with a light and camera. Any suspicious polyps can be removed during this procedure. If you’re at high risk for colorectal cancer, your physician will probably recommend a colonoscopy, the most accurate type of screening. Since it can take 10 to 15 years for polyps to become cancerous, they can usually be removed before it’s too late — in fact, regular screenings can increase your survival rate of colorectal cancer by 60 percent!

SYMPTOMS OF COLORECTAL CANCER
Colorectal cancer may not cause symptoms at first. But if you experience any of the following, contact your provider right away:

- Blood in your stool
- Rectal bleeding
- A change in bowel habits (diarrhea or constipation)
- The feeling your bowel doesn’t empty all the way
- Cramping in your belly
- Weakness and fatigue
- Unintended weight loss

LIFESTYLE CHANGES TO LOWER YOUR RISK
In addition to getting regular colorectal cancer screenings, there are many lifestyle changes you can make to reduce your risk of getting the disease:

- Healthy diet: Eat plenty of veggies, fruits and whole grains and try to limit red and processed meats.
- Exercise: Engage regularly in moderate to vigorous physical activity (think walking, running, swimming, playing tennis or mowing the lawn).
- Reduce alcohol consumption: Women should have no more than one drink per day; men should not have more than two.
- Better yet, abstain completely.
- Healthy weight: Being overweight can increase your risk for colorectal cancer, so try to stay close to your ideal weight.
- Don’t smoke: Avoiding cigarettes can help prevent many other types of cancer as well.

By staying on top of colorectal screenings and being proactive in your health, you’re likely to eliminate the chances of ever getting colorectal cancer.

- 2 tbsp. – dry bread crumbs
- 1 tsp. – garlic and herb seasoning (salt-free)
- ⅛ tsp. – pepper (freshly ground)
- 1 tbsp. – canola oil
- 1 tbsp. – dijon mustard
- 2 – 6 oz. tilapia fillets
- parsley for garnish (optional)

DIRECTIONS

Place the first 4 ingredients above in a blender or food processor. Process for 45 seconds or until finely ground. Transfer the crumb mixture to a dish. Heat oil in a large nonstick skillet over medium heat. Brush mustard over both sides of the fillets. Dredge in the crumb mixture. Place fish in the pan. Cook ~3 minutes on each side. Do this until the fish flakes easily when tested with a fork or reaches your desired degree of doneness. Sprinkle with parsley, optional.

NURSELINE ADVICE:
SUMMER SUN SAFETY TIPS

Summer weather has arrived. Since Colorado is known for its sunshine, we are all eager to get outside and soak it up. Unfortunately, Colorado also has the nation’s highest per-capita rate of skin cancer. Much of our state is at a higher elevation. With every 1,000 meters in altitude, the UV levels increase by about 10%. That means it’s even more crucial to protect yourself during your mountain adventures. Thankfully, skin cancer is one of the most preventable cancers. You can protect yourself by practicing these sun safety tips.

AVOID:

If you can avoid sun exposure during the time of peak UV rates between 11 a.m. – 3 p.m. in Colorado, that is ideal. Seek shade if you are outside during these times. Remember, even when it is cloudy, UV rays are still reaching your skin.

PROTECT:

One of the most common sun protection techniques is sunscreen. Sunscreen comes in a wide array of options. Find one that you will use and feels good on your skin. A great practice to ensure daily sunscreen use is to place it next to your toothbrush. Most people remember to brush daily. When choosing a sunscreen, “broad spectrum” is the best. It protects your skin from UVA and UVB rays. Pick a sunscreen with a Sun Protection Factor (SPF) at or above 30. Apply ~1 oz. of sunscreen to all sun-exposed portions of your face and body. You should be reapplying sunscreen every 2 hours (or more often if swimming or sweating). Be sure your sunscreen has not expired or separated. This can decrease its effectiveness. This often happens if left in high heat, such as a parked car, for prolonged periods. You can also use clothing as a simple mode of sun protection. Great options include a wide brimmed hat, long-sleeve shirt and sunglasses with 100% UV protection.

CHECK:

It’s recommended to do a self-check of your skin monthly for new growths, changing moles, scaly red patches and sores that don’t heal. You should also visit a dermatologist for a yearly skin check.
